

Common Sense on Talking Safely Online

WHAT'S THE ISSUE?

Kids love connecting with others online. Most young people talk online only with their friends and family. But as a parent, you might be concerned that a stranger with bad intent (predator) could contact your child.

Predatory behavior is when people contact your child on the Internet (mostly through instant messaging, chat rooms, or social networking sites) and attempt to “groom” your child for a relationship. These people try to win children’s trust by hiding their true identities. They may try to get kids into creepy or dangerous situations by pretending to have similar interests, giving them compliments, and letting them talk about anything they want.

They typically tell children to keep the friendship secret, and they may even threaten kids if they tell anybody.

As the relationship develops, the predator may send pictures, ask a child to send them pictures, and then ask to meet face to face.

WHY DOES IT MATTER?

Teaching your child to be alert about how predators groom their targets is crucial to keeping your child safe.

With very small kids, it is best if you are present when they are online. At this age, you may choose to block your kids from talking online, or create strict rules for them to follow about who they can talk to. For older elementary school children, you may choose to give them more freedom after first discussing how to stay safe online.

COMMON SENSE SAYS

Discuss responsible online behavior. Establish rules for appropriate instant messaging and chatting online, and explain that you’re enforcing those rules because you care about their safety. You may want to involve an older sibling who can model good online behavior and can stay involved in their younger siblings’ online lives.

Establish rules for who’s okay to talk to. Online talk should generally be with people your children know, like family and friends.

Set boundaries for what topics are okay to discuss. Kids shouldn’t answer questions online that make them feel uncomfortable. They also shouldn’t talk about adult topics with strangers.

Make sure your child feels safe telling a trusted adult. If something creepy or inappropriate happens online, kids need to know they won’t get in trouble if they tell an adult they trust. Also, avoid banning them from the computer. Kids are less likely to tell parents when they experience a problem on the computer if they think as a result they won’t be allowed to use it.

Remind your kids not to give strangers private information. Kids should never give out their name, address, school, phone number, email, pictures, or anything that could identify who they are.

CEO NOTES

You Make the Difference

Alison S. Kelley, Chief Executive Officer

You might not realize how important you are in the lives of the children around you. I'd like to affirm you and all that you do each day. You are the parents, the grandparents, the aunts and uncles and cousins. You are the foster parents. You are the community volunteers who support foster parents. You are the teachers, the mentors, the coaches and ministers and youth leaders. You are the caseworkers and detectives and policymakers. You play a critical role in keeping children safe and healthy; from the smallest acts of managing family meals or monitoring online activity, or bringing peppermint ice cream to an ill grandchild, to making mission-critical decisions about resource deployment or sweeping policy changes, you make the difference for more children than you might realize. Thank you for all of your acts of kindness, large or small: the children noticed and were better for it.

Your support for Liberty House has been critical this year and it has paid off: because of you, and because of the tireless dedication of our clinical team, we were able to see more children this last year than ever before. Through innovation, sheer hard work and long hours, we were able to make a difference for many children.

Unfortunately, there are still many more children who need to be served by Liberty House than what our small facility can handle. This year we have launched a bold capital campaign to purchase a nearby building so that we can remodel our existing structure; that will allow us to help many more children by providing more same-day and next day appointments for children who need urgent medical assessment, as well as more interview appointments. We will be able to help families by improving follow-up care with the help of our local mental health partners. The only thing we have to do is raise money, and you can help us with that. Visit us online, learn more about Nurturing Growth and Hope, and please spread the word to help us meet our goals. Please consider a generous gift so that we can reach our goal by December 31, 2014! We have five weeks to raise $500,000!

I am proud to work with such dedicated and professional staff members, volunteers, and community partners who work so hard to help children be safe. These professionals give their absolute best every day because they know that the children who come through our doors will need positive experiences to soften the trauma they've been through. Thank you for making it possible for us to be here! ★

VOICES - Volunteers Offering Inspiration, Community, Encouragement & Support

VOICES volunteers meet at Liberty House every month to work on projects and socialize with each other. It's a fun time to share enthusiasm for volunteering while getting to know each other better. We truly look forward to seeing all our friends each month!

#Giving Tuesday

#GIVING TUESDAY™

You've heard of Black Friday and Cyber Monday? Well there's a new day in the Holiday Season – a day to give back! This December 2nd we hope you will be inspired to take action to improve your local community, give back in better, smarter ways to the charities and causes that matter to you (like Liberty House) and help create a better world.

Block, ignore, or leave. Most kids know to brush off unwanted contact. Encourage this behavior.

Look for warning signs. Does your child seem withdrawn, emotionally distant, spend endless hours online, or seem to be hiding something? The kids who get sucked into inappropriate online relationships often show warning signs. They might be hiding an online relationship they don't want you to know about. If you think this might be happening, ask your child about it! ★

2014 Champions for Children Luncheon

Billy Cordero & Family

KGW Anchor Russ Lewis

The Hare Family

The annual Champions for Children Luncheon was held Tuesday, September 23, 2014 at the Salem Convention Center. Master of Ceremonies Russ Lewis of KGW Channel 8 News welcomed over 650 guests, including a long list of community leaders and elected officials. Russ introduced the luncheon theme, Moving Forward and Building Hope, which referred both to the positive effect on children as well as the forward momentum of Liberty House itself. Board Chair Scott Sadler spoke about the value and vision of Liberty House, noting that during our time together we would focus on:

- Understanding the risks to children
- Hearing, seeing and feeling what kind of difference Liberty House makes and
- Celebrating an opportunity for everyone to join in the vision for the future and renew or become part of the family of supporters for Liberty House.

Liberty House Chief Executive Officer Alison Kelley applauded the work of community partners coming together to help keep children safe and healthy. She explained that when information comes to light that a child or teen has been or may have been abused, there were many professionals such as medical providers, law enforcement professionals, and the Department of Human Services workers who needed to hear the information so they could play a role in helping that child. The biggest challenge lies in making that process more coordinated and child-friendly so it doesn't add trauma. In the opening video, guests saw examples of children being asked by many different professionals to describe what had happened to them. That video was designed to help viewers experience what children experience when the services aren't coordinated.

In the main video, guests were able to see the benefit of all the partners working together and children entering a welcoming, cheerful environment including the bears and quilts donated by many generous community supporters. Community leader and survivor Billy Cordero, shared his own personal journey, recounting extremely traumatic childhood experiences and driving home the point that Liberty House makes a huge difference for children. At the end of Billy's emotional comments his wife and three children joined him on stage and those present showed their support through a standing ovation. Russ Lewis shared that from his perspective as a journalist, the worst stories he has to cover are those involving child abuse, and he was glad to be able to support the efforts of Liberty House. Scott Sadler made a passionate appeal for support so that the children in our community can move forward and build hope, which is only possible with the support of the community.

Special thanks are in order for outstanding community partner and Presenting Sponsor Mountain West Investment Corporation, truly a driving force for positive change in our community. Special thanks also to sponsors Rich Duncan Construction, Salem Health, Diagnostic Imaging of Salem, Salem Evangelical Church, PH Tech, Santiam Hospital, Portland General Electric and WVP Health Authority; the Salem Conference Center, the many volunteers who helped plan, set-up and clean-up the event; Allied Video Productions; Laurie Marie Photography; and our amazing Table Captains. Hats off to the Liberty House Board Members who participated in the filming. By coming together we will be able to serve more children in the year to come. Thank you.
